Steyr M9-A1 pistol

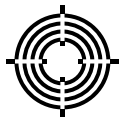

In 2004, the Steyr M and Steyr S series pistol took on a redesign and was replaced by the newly-released Steyr M9-A1.

This new Steyr M9-A1 pistol included such features as a Picatinny rail (instead of the proprietary rail) under the barrel, a redesigned grip and frame shape. The Picatinny rail, or STANAG 2324 is the adoption of the US MIL-STD-1913 as the NATO standard optical and electronic sight mount and standard accessory rail (STANAG is the NATO abbreviation for Standardization Agreement.) Originally used for scopes, the use of the Picatinny rail has now expanded to other accessories such as tactical lights, night vision devices, laser sightings, bi-pods, fore grips and even bayonets.

Furthermore the grip angle has been changed to 111 degrees to improve ergonomics. The M9-A1 has a very low slide profile which holds the barrel axis close to the hand making the pistol more comfortable to shoot and allowing for faster aim recovery when shooting rapidly.

The new Steyr M9-A1 pistol retains Steyr's proprietary triangular/trapezoid fixed sight for originality.
